Ike Hails Triumph In Senate For His Price Support Plan

Of Benefit To All, Eisenhower Says Of Approval For Flexible Floor Under U.S. Farm Products

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower voiced great satisfaction with Senate passage of his farm program today, but declared emphatically he does not regard it as a political victory.

He said yesterday's vote, giving him the flexible price support system he has fought for, should be regarded as just another step in a program designed for the welfare of the American farmer and for a healthy, stable economy benefitting all Americans.

The President said there are several discrepancies between Senate and House versions of the legislation he would like to see ironed out at conference.

These include, he said, a dual price plan for wheat, and a wool program with no time limit. And he said he'd like to see the final version leave the dairy price support program as it is—that is with the 75 per cent of parity figure recently established by Secretary of Agriculture Benson.

Glen Taylor On Way Back To Senate

By The Associated Press
Glen Taylor, the one-time singing cowboy senator who bolted the Democratic Party in 1948 to campaign for vice president on the Progressive Party ticket headed by Henry A. Wallace, is over the first hurdle in a political comeback try.

Taylor won the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator in yesterday's primary in Idaho.

In Nebraska, Rep. Carl T. Curtis defeated Gov. Robert Crosby in the feature Republican Senate race for a six-year term, equivalent to election.

And in Arkansas, Gov. Francis Cherry, apparently lost his bid for renomination.

Sen. Harry C. Dworkshak easily won renomination in the Republican primary in Idaho.

IN THE RACE for the Democratic nomination for governor of Arkansas, which is equivalent to election, Cherry apparently lost by less than 5,000 votes to Orval Faubus, a weekly newspaper publisher.

The Delaware Democratic convention yesterday renominated Sen. J. Allen Frear Jr. over the opposition of some state party leaders who contend he is too "conservative."

Nebraskans also nominated Rep. Roman Hruska (R) and James Green (D) for the remaining four years of the term of the late Sen. Hugh Butler and Mrs. George Abel (R) and William H. Meier (D) for the remaining two-month term of the late Sen. Dwight Griswold.

Witness Immunity Bill Sent To Ike

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate today passed and sent to the White House a House-passed bill to allow the granting of immunity from federal prosecution to witnesses whose testimony is desired in investigations of subversive activity.

The measure is a new version of one which the Senate had passed last year over objections of the late Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio).

Seven Nations To Join U.S. In Asia Pact

Talks Set Sept. 6 In Philippines To Work Out Alliance

WASHINGTON (AP)—Seven countries were reported ready today to join the United States in drafting an alliance they hope will check further Red aggression in Southeast Asia.

Simultaneous announcement in all eight capitals is expected late this week. The various foreign ministers reportedly will meet Sept. 6 at Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines, to weld the pact.

Nations said to be ready to attend are Britain, France, the United States, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand and Pakistan.

U. S. diplomatic officials acknowledged there appears to be no chance that such Asiatic countries as India, Burma, Indonesia, and Ceylon—all of which have important stakes in Southeast Asia—would agree either to attend the meeting or to associate themselves indirectly with the military objectives of the alliance.

AMERICAN officials, however, are clinging to some hope that India and other "neutralist" nations in Asia will join in the economic phases of the proposed pact.

Members of the proposed alliance, it was said, would pledge to cooperate to improve economic conditions in the region. Cooperation (Continued on Page Two)

City Prepares For Dollar Day

Household schedules are being juggled throughout the districts as individual families make plans to look over the bargains listed by Circleville stores for this year's "Dollar Day"—scheduled here all day Thursday.

In line with a traditional custom, and to facilitate the job for the shopping motorists, Mayor Bob Hedges has announced parking will be free all day Thursday.

Also in line with the "Dollar Day" spirit, merchants have put special prices on much of their merchandise, aiming to draw new customers and likewise give outstanding buying opportunities to their "regulars." "Dollar Day" in Circleville, an annual program, frequently attracts buyers living well outside the county district.

Trade observers here anticipate better than usual success for this year's "Dollar Day" because of the general business upturn noted here over many past months.

Testimony In Bell Phone Case Ended

COLUMBUS (AP)—Testimony in the long Ohio Bell Telephone Co. rate case ended today, and attorneys for both sides huddled to decide whether they will present oral final arguments in a week or so.

Both sides made motions which Robert Moulton, state utilities commission chairman, said will not be ruled on until the case is decided.

Ohio Bell is seeking an $8,913,000 annual increase. Some of the dozen cities fighting the case have asked the company be forced to cut its rates instead.

Attorney Ashley Van Duzer, chief counsel for the company in the rate case, asked the commission to dismiss a complaint filed against the company by Cleveland calling for a rate cut. He said the complaint and evidence introduced disregard the Ohio law that provides the utility an opportunity to earn a fair rate of return.

Then Attorney David Postlewaite, special counsel for Cleveland, moved the company's application for an increase be denied. Both motions were taken under consideration.

Ohio Bell objected generally to exhibits of the cities claiming they have no bearing on the case. In turn, the cities objected in general to company exhibits.

The cities introduced exhibits aimed at supporting their position that Ohio Bell earnings now are too high.

Emergency March On Polio Begins

Bob Moyer, chairman of the local chapter of the March of Dimes, announced the Emergency March Against Polio was getting under way in Pickaway County Wednesday with the mailing of contribution cards to residents of the district.

The cards are addressed to local box holders and explain the need for the emergency campaign. "We didn't receive quite as many cards as we needed to reach every residence in the county," Moyer said. "However, anyone who didn't receive a card can mail his or her contribution to March of Dimes, care of Joe Wilson Garage, N. Court St., Circleville."

Thus Pickaway County is taking the first step to help raise the $20 million needed to replenish the nation's funds against polio, rapidly ebbing under the drain of necessary treatments and vital research progress.

British Set To Entertain No. 1 Russian

MOSCOW (AP)—The British embassy polished up its best china, silver and glass today for Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov.

The No. 1 Russian makes an unprecedented appearance tonight at an embassy banquet honoring former British Prime Minister Clement Attlee and six other Labor party leaders visiting Moscow en route to a three-week stay in Communist China.

Malenkov and other top Soviet leaders set the pace for Attlee's top-drawer reception—the biggest given a Western delegation since World War II—with a four-hour dinner party last night at the country home of the late famed Russian writer, Maxim Gorky.

The Russians whisked the Laborites and British Ambassador Sir William Hayter off to the Gorky villa, 22 miles from Moscow, only two hours after they arrived in the Soviet capital by Russian military plane. It was the first time in memory the Soviets had entertained high-ranking Westerners in an informal country house atmosphere.

British guests said the Russians talked at length with Attlee, left-wing Laborite Aneurin Bevan and the others in their party. Attlee sat next to Malenkov at dinner, served on a terrace overlooking the gardens and a small stream. Labor party Secretary Morgan Phillips told newsmen it would be "safe" to conclude that the two men discussed the desirability of closer relations between Britain and the Soviet Union.

Dr. John Smashes 'Abduction' Myth

'Vountarily' Deserted To Reds, Says West German Ex-Spy Chief

BERLIN (AP)—Dr. Otto John today destroyed the myth of his "abduction" by the Communist East.

He told a huge news conference in the Soviet sector he deserted as West Germany's security chief on July 20 to expose what he called revival of Nazism in West Germany, and to work for German unity by telling the "real truth" about the European Defense Community.

Appearing before more than 400 correspondents of the world press, John declared he went over to the Reds to join what he described as the only forum he could find to warn the world the United States is using Britain, France and the Bonn regime as "tools" for another war which would destroy Germany.

In Bonn, Allied and West German officials plunged into special conferences to consider the impact of John's own statement he had voluntarily deserted to the East.

CHANCELLOR Konrad Adenauer's government and the U. S. High Commission had contended John was lured or tricked into East Germany by the Communists.

John read a long statement and then jostled with correspondents in a rapid fire question and answer period.

He answered them all, in his way, quietly and firmly, with one exception. Asked about the wife he abruptly left behind when he crossed into the Soviet sector the night of July 20, John said he would not discuss private matters.

He said that during his recent trip to the United States, he "gathered that out of the hysterical fear in the United States, another war is being prepared and that the German people would suffer most from this war."

Only last week the West German government offered a reward of $119,000 for information that would clear up John's sensational disappearance. Asserting that he was being held against his will, the Bonn government also asked the three Western Allies to appeal to the Russians for his release.

The East Germans presented the 44-year-old John at an elaborately staged press gathering in Berlin's Soviet sector to which they had invited the entire Western press.

JOHN'S FIRST public appearance since he crossed to the Red camp 22 days ago shaped up as a major Communist propaganda effort.

Despite the East German government sponsorship of his appearance today, John insisted he is not a Communist.

"I remain politically independent as I always have been," he declared. "The same people who say today that I am a traitor are the people who said it 10 years ago."

Just 10 years ago John participated in the anti-Nazi putsch against Hitler's life but escaped reprisal by fleeing to Spain. His brother was executed for a part in the abortive plot.

"I am permitted to speak the real truth here which I could not do in West Germany," John told the newsmen today.

Attending the conference were former SS Col. Ernst Borrmann, one of the top men in the Communist counterintelligence corps, and several members of his staff.

Early in his speech, John assailed the European Defense Community as a conspiracy to prevent the reunion of Germany and to erect a war machine. He promised to disclose details.

He said the British have been trying to find a modus vivendi (way of living) with Communism "but the Americans will not permit it."

Rhodes, the Republican candidate for Ohio governor, discussed the conversation with reporters after emerging from the President's office.

With Rhodes on his visit to the president were his wife, Helen, and three daughters, Suzanne, 12, Sandra 9 and Sharon 14.

"The President wished me good luck and told me to continue my efforts," Rhodes said.

AFL Takes Aim At Legislature

CLEVELAND (AP)—More than 90 resolutions come under study by 750 delegates to the Ohio State Federation of Labor's annual meeting today.

Some of the resolutions will be aimed at the Ohio Legislature. Federation officers said in their report yesterday that the General Assembly has weakened the state's unemployment insurance law by amendments whittling down the eligibility of beneficiaries.

U. S. Rep. Michael A. Feighan, Cleveland Democrat, in a convention speech yesterday, said there were "strong indications" that the Republican administration "has just about swallowed the peaceful co-existence promoted by the Communist criminals in Moscow."

SAIGON (AP)—The fifth and final cease-fire in Indochina took effect today, officially ending the world's last active war. But the peace stirred no fanfare in this capital city of South Viet Nam.

Commanders of the French Union troops and the Communist-led Vietminh ordered their opposing forces to lay down their arms in South Viet Nam at 8 a. m.

The order was mostly a formality. Fighting had tapered off since the cease-fire became effective two weeks ago in North Viet Nam.

After the North Viet Nam cease-fire July 27, the armistice reached Central Viet Nam Aug. 1. It became effective in the kingdoms of Laos and Cambodia Aug. 6 and 7.

AFL Takes Aim At Legislature

CLEVELAND (AP)—More than 90 resolutions come under study by 750 delegates to the Ohio State Federation of Labor's annual meeting today.

Some of the resolutions will be aimed at the Ohio Legislature. Federation officers said in their report yesterday that the General Assembly has weakened the state's unemployment insurance law by amendments whittling down the eligibility of beneficiaries.

U. S. Rep. Michael A. Frighan, Cleveland Democrat, in a convention speech yesterday, said there were "strong indications" that the Republican administration "has just about swallowed the peaceful co-existence promoted by the Communist criminals in Moscow."

On the military side, members would promise to challenge any aggression in Southeast Asia. No specific line would be drawn against the Reds, informants said, but it would be understood informally that the non-Communist parts of Indochina would be covered, even though these states would not be pact signatories.

Despite limited Asiatic membership, American officials were pictured as confident the pact would discourage any new Red attack in Southeast Asia.

Although American policy makers were reported to be disappointed that India has declined thus far to support the alliance, they also were understood to feel this will not be fatal to success of the anti-Communist lineup.

Chillicothe Woman Driver Hurt But Accused Of Causing Crash

A Chillicothe woman driver, injured in a two-car accident Tuesday afternoon, has been cited to appear in city court here on an accusation of failure to stop within assured clear distance.

Mrs. Mary T. Street, 54, is scheduled to appear in Circleville Municipal Court Saturday as the result of the accident in which three people, including herself, were injured.

Mrs. Dorothy Watkins, 52, of 825 S. Scioto St. was one of the others injured. She was a passenger in the second car and suffered a cut on her left ear.

Another injured passenger in the same car which was driven by Bernice E. Wilson, 47, of Columbus, was Arnold McQueary, 42, of Columbus. He received a contusion on his head.

MRS. STREET suffered a laceration of the mouth and chin plus other injuries, according to the report by Deputies Dwight Radcliff and Carl White. Deputies said she refused hospital treatment although an ambulance brought her to Circleville.

However, a report from Chillicothe Hospital states that Mrs. Street was admitted here for treatment Wednesday morning. She was listed as being in "fairly good" condition with lacerations and a possible fractured right arm.

Witnesses told the deputies that the Wilson car was going south on Route 23 and seemed to slow down near Sheppard Rd. Mrs. Street's car, immediately behind, crashed into the rear of the Wilson car, the report added.

Mrs. Street said she did not know if her brakes failed; nor did she know if the Wilson car had stopped.

The White House is preparing a report on the American economy as of mid-year 1954 and the report shows a very hopeful picture, the President said. He added that the survey will be made public in a day or so.

In a related field, Eisenhower said he did not care to speculate at this time whether it will be possible to cut income taxes next year and balance the federal budget.

The Chief Executive disclosed he is at work on an address reviewing the accomplishments of Congress. He declined to shed any light on just when he will make the speech, and laughingly declined to say anything about such accomplishments until the session has been completed.

The President announced he will be host Friday to the members of his Cabinet at his mountain lodge retreat at Camp David near Thurmont, Md., about 65 miles north of Washington.

Is There One Answer?

As Thomas B. Read once said, "People will tell you the truth is simple. Half-truths are simple. The whole truth is the most complicated thing in God's universe."

The same applies to the complex problems of health and disease. Avoid the quack, charlatan, and cure-all type of healer. They can do you no good. Look, rather, to your family physician in all matters pertaining to health. He alone is qualified by training and experience to diagnose and treat disease. However, according to the report by Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff, the boy was not hurt.

Adrian Van Horn, 58 of Clarksville told the deputy he was going north on the Williamsport-Chillicothe Pike, 5.3 miles south of Williamsport, when the accident occurred.

Van Horn said he saw two boys on bikes ahead of him. A tractor started to pull into the road and the boys started to turn to avoid the tractor. Van Horn said he had started to pass the boys but could not help hitting Colter's bike.

Arson Suspect Being Checked By Fire Chief

The possibility of arson in connection with the fire that heavily damaged the Western Auto Store on W. Main St. last week was still under investigation Wednesday.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise said a 13-year old boy was still under suspicion. Wise said he had two witnesses who claimed they saw the boy near the scene of the blaze shortly before the fire was reported.

Pickaway County Probation and Juvenile Officer Karl Herrmann said he had investigated one of the witnesses. But, he added, the witness told him the youth could not have been responsible.

Herrmann said that in any event he thought the case should be handled entirely by the fire department. He said that department is authorized to investigate arson regardless of the age of anyone suspected.

Wise said he was pursuing the inquiry on his own due to the lack of cooperation from other local authorities.

Arson Suspect Being Checked By Fire Chief

The possibility of arson in connection with the fire that heavily damaged the Western Auto Store on W. Main St. last week was still under investigation Wednesday.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise said a 13-year old boy was still under suspicion. Wise said he had two witnesses who claimed they saw the boy near the scene of the blaze shortly before the fire was reported.

Pickaway County Probation and Juvenile Officer Karl Herrmann said he had investigated one of the witnesses. But, he added, the witness told him the youth could not have been responsible.

Herrmann said that in any event he thought the case should be handled entirely by the fire department. He said that department is authorized to investigate arson suspected of the age of anyone suspected.

Wise said he was pursuing the inquiry on his own due to the lack of cooperation from other local authorities.

Present Vs. Hereafter—Old Question, But Sharper Today

EDITOR'S NOTE — Can Christians hope to achieve universal justice and goodness in this world? It's the central question delegates to the Assembly of the World Council of Churches will be discussing next week. Here's a report on points they're likely to cover, second of four articles on the biggest Christian convention ever held in America.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—One of humanity's oldest riddles — whether man's first duty is to the here or the hereafter—today poses a sharpened question for churches around the globe.

It is being preached on, studied, argued over, read about, analyzed and interpreted.

It is being discussed in Sunday Schools and meetings and dealt with in scholarly papers and millions of words in the religious press.

"If the churches can speak on this with one mind, it is possible for them to bring guidance—and genuine hope—to a bewildered and menaced world," said Bishop J. Waskom Pickett, head of India's Methodist Church.

Couched in the phrase, "Christ—the hope of the world," the question is the theme of the two-week assembly of the World Council of churches, opening here Sunday.

"The theme has stirred a greater response than anything in the world council's brief history," said the Rev. Robert S. Bilheimer, the council's associate general secretary.

At the heart of the question is whether Christians can hope to fight for justice and goodness in this world, or whether those goals are deemed attainable only in a kingdom of God to come.

Is there any real hope for historical progress, however, slow or faltering, toward a Godly realm, or must man simply await a "second coming?"

"We are living in an age in which many rash hopes are being proposed," said Dr. Marc Boegner, a council co-president and head of the Reformed Churches of France.

"It is an absolute necessity for the Christian church to cut through these hollow faiths, and offer a new conscience and a true value—that Christ is the only hope — both for man and his community."

Where that hope and effort should be centered—on this world or the next or both—has rent the ranks of Christianity since day when the apostles thought Jesus might usher in paradise at once.

It has rumbled through ages of subtle theological debate, flared into denominational break-ups, then been half forgotten, only to burst forth with renewed urgency in the modern era of ideological warfare.

The Scriptures abound with hints of the mystery:

"For now we see as through a glass darkly."

"But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."

"Here are principles and standards for human society, rooted in God's everlasting will, for which men can work," said Dr. G. K. A. Bell, Britain's bishop of Chichester and chairman of the council's Central Committee.

"But beyond man's greatest achievements or even his dreams is the kingdom—a new creation, a new world."

The theme involves complicated nuances of "eschatology" — the "end of all things"—and to what extent Christian ends can be gained in human affairs, this side of heaven.

Because of the subject's complexity and the age-old wrangling over it, there have been wide forebodings that it might deal the churches a sharp setback in their quest for a more united front.

"The New Testament eschatology," says theologian Reinhold Niebuhr, "is at once too naive for a sophisticated world and too sophisticated for the simple-minded modern man."

Until recently churches seemed split geographically about the crux of Christian hope — with trouble-buffed Europeans eyeing a "future kingdom" and "activist" Americans confidently scraping to set the present in order.

"But a lot has happened to American thinking," said Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, the council's American secretary, "and a lot has happened to European thinking. They have cross-fertilized each other."

Three years of conferences in preparation for the world assembly have contributed to a growing accord about the ultimate Christian hopes—and worldly aims.

"Our hope is anchored in a kingdom that both has come and is coming," said a 32-member council advisory commission, including such famed scholars and theologians as Niebuhr, Europe's Karl Barth and poet, S. Eliot.

"If the church is to find complete fulfillment, and if earthly existence is to be saved from meaninglessness," their final report says, "we must look not only to the course of earthly history itself, but beyond it."

The report, on which the Assembly will act, repudiates a theological pessimism which hopes only for the world's end, and it also warns against counting on any worldly Utopia and forgetting "the whole world lies under judgement."

"God through Jesus Christ has entered into the tangled web of human history," the report says. "We see the gracious power of the kingdom already at work among men."

But "even if our works fail and are buried in the rubble of human

THIS IS IT, MEN

MEN MAY RANT and rave and scream that no one man can be that powerful. But are any ready to predict positively that Christian Dior, the Paris designer of women's clothes, is not destined to be a one-man blight on American womanhood—and thus on the American home?

The threat is clear—from clear across the Atlantic. Sketches show how Dior has "dropped the waistline to the hips, flattened the bust, and sent women's fashions back to the jazz age of the 1920s."

It's not as if young women of today could look upon this style—which includes the cloche helmet pulled down over eyes and ears—as something with the glamor of the unfamiliar. In New York the show "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" recently displayed all the horrors of the tubular-torso dresses. It's true the style exposes the legs from the knee down. But so would a barrel, that traditional covering for modest ladies in emergencies.

What the 1920s dress really amounts to is a chopped-off Mother Hubbard. And therein lies the opportunity for the smart girl with the courage to be different from the herd and continue to look like a girl. She'll be a standout honey, and the bees will line out after her.

It's time, of course, to cut American styles loose from fakirs whose sole ability consists of digging out styles of 30 years ago, regardless of how asinine they were originally, and producing them with a flourish and a mince as "Creep's Creation of 1954." Certainly American designers can, and do, do much better.

FRENCH FASHION FRENZY

IT IS ENCOURAGING that a large segment of the ladies' garment industry in the United States, as well as preponderant male opinion, is opposed to the sad sack fashions for this fall proclaimed by a French "designer" who came into possession of a fashion magazine of the 1920s.

Some designers are accentuating femininity to new degrees, and Jaques Fath, a Frenchman who is described as the sad sack designer's chief rival, is another strong exponent of the natural.

But it seems a battle of sorts is joined between basic concepts, with compromise out of the question. And it is a disquieting thought that women 30 years ago permitted themselves to be duped into wearing style monstrosities identical to those now proposed.

The way things are shaping up in organized baseball, the time may come when it must be a home run or no score.

Occasionally there is hope that society is undergoing improvement. Consumption of garlic is at the lowest figure in years.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

It used to be that the beginning of an education in the United States was a simple matter, locally controlled, directed mostly by parents and conducted principally by clergymen and unmarried women. The boys and girls were taught to read and write and to do some arithmetic.

If they wanted to go further, they read Greek and Latin, memorized vast amounts of literature, learned some French, German and the bases of science. If they desired to push their fortunes further, they specialized in some profession, sometimes going to a European university for the purpose. We produced a remarkable lot of scholars that way.

Since the days of Horace Mann (1796-1859), education of some kind has been usual for all children in many but not all parts of the country and in some it has been compulsory. Since those days, the huge educational establishment of the United States has become strictly professionalized and secularized with a decreasing relationship of the parent to the school. As President William F. Russell of Teachers College, Columbia University, said:

"While legally the parent has the authority over the education of the child, in practice we delegate our power to members of school boards or legislatures who act as our representatives. . ."

One of the problems that faces educators is to define education. They have to ask themselves whether they know what they are doing. This has become an increasingly serious matter because public opinion is not so sure that education actually educates in the United States. Nicholas Murray Butler, for several decades President of Columbia University in the days when such an official was not only an administrator but also a scholar, once discussed this subject:

"...Education... must mean a gradual adjustment to the spiritual possessions of the race, with a view to realizing one's own potentialities and to assisting in carrying forward that complex of ideas, acts, and institutions which we call civilization. In other words, education in a true sense has to do not only with the individual to be educated, but with the environment into which and for which he is to be educated. . ."

Further he wrote:
"...He (the child) is not born into a new world, where nothing has ever happened. He is born into a world full of experience, some of the experience bitter, some magnificent, and he is entitled to know what it is about and what it means. "That inheritance is fivefold. It is scientific, it is literary, it is aesthetic, it is institutional, and it is religious. Without them all he cannot become a truly educated or a truly cultivated man. He is entitled to know what those who have preceded him have accomplished, what their accomplishment means for him, and what he is to do in the world which their accomplishment has brought to pass."

This is a full definition and would require that educators not only be philosophers and historians but also moralists. Without morality, learning the development of special intellectual functions can become a monstrosity in any society. Dr. Klaus Fuchs was an educated man with private concepts of morality. He was capable of being a spy and a thief, just as the 992 page text of the Oppenheimer hearings provides evidence that Dr. Oppenheimer, who is one of the most learned men in our country. SYNOPSIS

A dated scrap of paper marked "Delta Lines, Cabin 5" sends detective Carney Wilde aboard a luxury boat cruising from Cincinnati to New Orleans, in the hope of apprehending one Charles Alexander Stewart. This youthful clerk had absconded with funds belonging to a bank in Philadelphia, and in the course of his flight, had killed a policeman. As Wilde stealthily searches Cabin 5, he is surprised by the sudden appearance of his occupant, Miss Pomeroy, a professional photographer on her way to the Mardi Gras. The tall, handsome, self-sufficient young career woman orders him, at gun-point, from her room.

CHAPTER EIGHT

MISS POMEROY said to me: "Tell me what gives you any right to ask me questions. About anything."

I said: "I told you about the man we're looking for. He's a killer, so that makes him your problem, too. But, strictly speaking, I don't have any right to question you." I brought out the letter Grodnik had given me and held it out to her. "You know me, you said. If you'll read this, you may be willing to help me."

One long thin hand came up automatically for the letter. She didn't read much of it. She folded it again, inserted it in the envelope.

"In my pocket," she said in a thin tone. "In my coat."

I went to the bed again and bent over the coat. The wad of papers came out easily this time. The Delta Line receipt I skipped. Under it was a paid hotel bill. The next was a receipt from Mabley Carver's department store in Cincinnati. A receipt for one wardrobe trunk, bought today and paid for in cash.

I dropped the papers on the bed. And then I sat again. "Bought today," I said to Russell. "Sure it wasn't empty?"

"These were in it," Miss Pomeroy said, gesturing at the two big leather bags against the wall. "My equipment."

Russell nodded. "Could be. I know she had the trunk and two or three bags, maybe four." He glanced around the room. "Enough extra stuff here to account for it all," he admitted.

"Miss Pomeroy," I said, "would you mind telling me why you came on board at the last minute without a prior reservation? There's no reason why you have to tell me, I'll admit. But I'll have to find out somehow."

"I'm on assignment for Vacation," she said with no hesitation. "It was a last-minute idea of the editor's. I've got a letter from him somewhere."

"The gun," I said. "Why the ready gun?"

"I'm a single woman, Mr. Wilde, and my job takes me to some rough places. I always carry a gun. There's a permit in my bag. And I know how to use it. Now, what else?"

"Just an apology, I guess," I said. I watched her blue eyes grow shadowed. "I'm not much good at apologizing. Could I go away somewhere and practice and come back another time?"

"Of course," she murmured.

I looked at her as I eased the door shut and she was still there, standing straight and wonderfully tall, the overhead light falling on her lustrous hair, framing the line of her chin with a silvery edging, making slight hollows below her cheekbones, touching her full mouth with a gentle glow. She held her eyes hard on mine all the while I pulled the door shut.

"Smitten, Mr. Wilde?" Russell suggested. "A mite tall for some, but not for you. And not for me. A veritable doll, no?"

"I'll have to check the boat's crew, Russell," I said. "Can you set that up for me?"

"Easy," Russell said. "Two shifts only. Not much work while we're actually moving. We always hire extra hands in Cincinnati for loading and unloading. The stewards might be hard to round up all at one time, but—"

"Will do. What about the rest of the passengers?"

"I don't know. How many are there?"

"Roughly, 200."

"I guess you better get me the list."

"Sure. Also the captain is giving a party tonight. A get-together for the passengers. Might be a good idea to have a look at all the bedroom passengers, maybe, since your man had a bedroom reservation. What do you think?"

"Could be. Can you fix it?"

"Sure."

I went back to my bedroom, locked the door and stretched out full length on the soft double bed.

Outside in the corridor a voice spoke, sounding muted, but distinct inside my room. It was Mr. Russell using a public address system.

"All passengers are reminded of the captain's party in the dining-saloon. The saloon is forward on the Texas deck. That's the center deck of the boat. Come when you're ready, come as you are. No rules. No formality. The captain's giving a party and everything's on the house. On the boat, maybe I should say. Everyone's invited."

I got up and went into the bathroom, combed my hair, wiped my face with a damp cloth and buttoned my jacket. Then I opened the door and went to the captain's party.

At the foot of the forward staircase, young Mr. Russell stood, chatting amiably with a short, white-haired man who had his back to me. Russell had changed his uniform jacket for a blue, brass-buttoned blazer with "Assistant Purser" embroidered above the breast pocket.

"Hello, Mr. Wilde," he said.

"Come and meet Dr. Riggs. You'll be sharing the same table."

The small, white-haired man was thin and he stood very straight. His sharp chin was held very high. He took my hand in a quick snatch, gripping hard.

"Not doctor, my boy," he said in a hoarse, gravelly voice. "Just Doc. Old Doc Riggs. Pleasure to meet you, Mr. Wilde. Recovering from a traumatic experience, I see."

"That's a nice way of saying it, Doc," I laughed.

"If you can't say it nice, don't say it, that's the way I see it." The little man cocked his head bird-like to one side and looked at me with confident, faded-blue eyes that saw everything there was to see. He wore a suit of small checks, a blue bow tie that was just the watery shade of his eyes. The small aster in his buttonhole was a basic part of his atmosphere. He grinned at me and his wide thin mouth looked extremely wise and knowing. Doc Riggs looked like a graduate con man. He dressed that way and he had a voice that could carry a mile.

"Pitch man, Doc?" I asked. "Or a carnie?"

"I won't deny either impeachment, sir," he chuckled. "Although I am now retired from the hurling-burling scramble for a quick bit of crutch, I must confess there was a time when Greatorex and Co. were wont to call on me whenever their solid gold brass watches were finding few takers among the reubens. And Benbow's Mammoth Carnival, to a man, once referred to me admiringly as Spindle Jack Riggs in recognition of a certain small adeptness I managed to acquire through the deft dexterity of a delicate digit on the controlling gear of a wheel of fortune. But all that was long ago. Have you any shares of High Licking Oil, Coal and Copper, Inc. in your portfolio, Mr. Wilde? I think I could find a few magnificently engraved specimens of high perfidy and profit. Both perfidy and profit to be mine, I assure you."

Russell and I were both grinning hugely by the time Doc Riggs offered his stock for sale.

"Doc, I've got to break it off, I'm afraid," Russell said with genuine regret. "I've promised to introduce Mr. Wilde to the captain and then I've got errands to run. I hope you'll remember all this so we can pick it up again later."

"If I forget any, I can make up a better one, Mr. Russell," Doc said happily. "Please, Mr. Wilde. We'll meet again at dinner, I believe."

I let Russell pull me away from the dapper little con-man.

"Let's just walk around the outside of the mob," he suggested.

"Riggs, by the way, is in bedroom six. I'll point out all the top-dog passengers I see. I won't be able to stick around after the captain comes in."

not dream of visiting the U. S., or even a nearby vacation spot. hey don't have the money.

Here again, the answer is higher pay, hard work and thrift—other lessons which Europe could learn to advantage.

There are many hard-working and conscientious people in these propaganda agencies. But there seems to be a lack of common sense and an understanding of human nature somewhere, presumably in the top levels at Washington.

They are glamorizing the United States, exciting envy and distrust, instead of publicizing the basic qualities and virtues which have made us the world's richest and most powerful nation.

Congressional demands for abolishing these agencies or reducing their appropriations have sometimes seemed shortsighted. However, their work seems to have won us few friends abroad. And unless they adopt a more sensible and practical advertising approach, they could be abolished without any great loss.

For they are not doing a good job of advertising the real United States or its people.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

Editors Note: This is the second of a series of articles Ray Tucker is writing in Italy on his homeward-bound trip from Egypt.

ROME — American businessmen, industrialists and relatively low-salaried European tourists—schoolteachers, secretaries and clerks—are doing a better job of advertising the United States in Europe than the U. S. Information Service or the Point Four Agency.

That observation, however, is not meant as a wholesale indictment of the government's propaganda activities, although they have been extremely inept in many respects. Let me cite a personal experience.

While in Rome, I strolled up the Via Veneta, which is the Italian capital's Fifth Avenue. The USIS and the American library have a handsome and, probably, an expensive building on that thoroughfare. There may be no cause to criticize the swank location, for a good advertising spot is necessary, whether one is promoting opinion of a country or selling high-class merchandise.

On the outside of the USIS building, enclosed in glass cases, there is a series of beautifully colored pictures of scenes from American life. The over-all caption is "Vision of America." After traveling through Egypt, Greece, Italy and Spain, the United States is not a "vision." It is a Utopian reality.

NO FRIENDS—But the pictures which USIS displays would make no friends for the United States. The most stupid photograph reproduces the Massachusetts governor's home at Boston and describes it as a "palazzo," which means "palace" in Italian. Imagine the late Calvin Coolidge being told he was reading in a "palazzo" in Boston!

Another USIS print depicts the George Washington Bridge, which connects Manhattan and New Jersey. A third portrays an idyllic scene of the farms and village of East Corinth, Vermont. Finally, there is a shot of how irrigation has made Southern California's one-time desert a garden of fruits and vegetables, as the USIS caption reads, "the Urban Population."

These government pictures excite foreign envy and jealousy rather than admiration, especially as our immigration laws limit sharply any emigration from Europe and elsewhere to the U. S. A. Thus, the pictures offer a will-o'-the-wisp dream.

In contrast, the vast array of American goods on the European market present a lesson in hard work, efficiency and productivity, which is Europe's greatest need. The streets at night are bright with neon signs advertising the products of Western practicality. They outsell European stuff in almost every line—automobiles, toothpaste, soft drinks, candy, medicines, tractors, etc.

But nowhere does USIS, so far as I have learned, present a panorama of America at work in preference to the Massachusetts "palazzo."

WONDER—Another phenomenon which impresses Europeans is the number of ordinary Americans who are able to afford these expensive tours. Numerous people over here wonder how they can do it, since Europeans in the same economic category can-

THIS IS IT, MEN

MEN MAY RANT and rave and scream that no one man can be that powerful. But are any ready to predict positively that Christian Dior, the Paris designer of women's clothes, is not destined to be a one-man blight on American womanhood—and thus on the American home?

The threat is clear—from clear across the Atlantic. Sketches show how Dior has "dropped the waistline to the hips, flattened the bust, and sent women's fashions back to the jazz age of the 1920s."

"All passengers are reminded of the captain's party in the dining-saloon. The saloon is forward on the Texas deck. That's the center deck of the boat. Come when you're ready, come as you are. No rules. No formality. The captain's giving a party and everything's on the house. On the boat, maybe I should say. Everyone's invited."

I got up and went into the bathroom, combed my hair, wiped my face with a damp cloth and buttoned my jacket. Then I opened the door and went to the captain's party.

At the foot of the forward staircase, young Mr. Russell stood, chatting amiably with a short, white-haired man who had his back to me. Russell had changed his uniform jacket for a blue, brass-buttoned blazer with "Assistant Purser" embroidered above the breast pocket.

"Hello, Mr. Wilde," he said.

"Come and meet Dr. Riggs. You'll be sharing the same table."

The small, white-haired man was thin and he stood very straight. His sharp chin was held very high. He took my hand in a quick snatch, gripping hard.

"Not doctor, my boy," he said in a hoarse, gravelly voice. "Just Doc. Old Doc Riggs. Pleasure to meet you, Mr. Wilde. Recovering from a traumatic experience, I see."

"That's a nice way of saying it, Doc," I laughed.

"If you can't say it nice, don't say it, that's the way I see it." The little man cocked his head bird-like to one side and looked at me with confidence, faded-blue eyes that saw everything there was to see. He wore a suit of small checks, a blue bow tie that was just the watery shade of his eyes. The small aster in his buttonhole was a basic part of his atmosphere. He grinned at me and his wide thin mouth looked extremely wise and knowing. Dog Riggs looked like a graduate con man. He dressed that way and he had a voice that could carry a mile.

"Fitch man, Doc?" I asked. "Or a carnie?"

"I won't deny either impeachment, sir," he chuckled. "Although I am now retired from the hurling-hurling scramble for a quick bit of crumby, I must confess there was a time when Greatorex and Co. were wont to call on me whenever their solid gold brass watches were finding few takers among the reubens. And Benbow's Mammoth Carnival, to a man, once referred to me admiringly as Spindle Jack Riggs in recognition of a certain small adeptness I managed to acquire through the deft dexterity of a delicate digit on the controlling graft of a wheel of fortune. But all that was long ago. Have you any shares of High Licking Oil, Coal and Copper, Inc. in your portfolio, Mr. Wilde? I think I could find a few magnificently engraved specimens of high perfidy and profit. Both perfidy and profit to be mine, I assure you."

Russell and I were both grinning hugely by the time Doc Riggs offered his stock for sale.

"Doc, I've got to break it off, I'm afraid," Russell said with genuine regret. "I've promised to introduce Mr. Wilde to the captain and then I've got errands to run. I hope you'll remember all this so we can pick it up again later."

"If I forget any, I can make up a better one, Mr. Russell," Doc said happily. "Please, Mr. Wilde. We'll meet again at dinner, I believe."

I let Russell pull me away from the dapper little con-man. "Let's just walk around the outside of the mob," he suggested. "Riggs, by the way, is in bedroom six. I'll point out all the top-dog passengers I see. I won't be able to stick around after the captain comes in."

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

Editors Note: This is the second of a series of articles Ray Tucker is writing in Italy on his homeward-bound trip from Egypt.

ROME — American businessmen, industrialists and relatively low-salaried European tourists—schoolteachers, secretaries and clerks—are doing a better job of advertising the United States in Europe than the U. S. Information Service or the Point Four Agency.

That observation, however, is not meant as a wholesale indictment of the government's propaganda activities, although they have been extremely inept in many respects. Let me cite a personal experience.

While in Rome, I strolled up the Via Veneta, which is the Italian capital's Fifth Avenue. The USIS and the American library have a handsome and, probably, an expensive building on that thoroughfare. There may be no cause to criticize the swank location, for a good advertising spot is necessary, whether one is promoting opinion of a country or selling high-class merchandise.

On the outside of the USIS building, enclosed in glass cases, there is a series of beautifully colored pictures of scenes from American life. The over-all caption is "Vision of America." After traveling through Egypt, Greece, Italy and Spain, the United States is not a "vision." It is a Utopian reality.

NO FRIENDS—But the pictures which USIS displays would make no friends for the United States. The most stupid photograph reproduces the Massachusetts governor's home at Boston and describes it as a "palazzo," which means "palace" in Italian. Imagine the late Calvin Coolidge being told he was reading in a "palazzo" in Boston!

Another USIS print depicts the George Washington Bridge, which connects Manhattan and New Jersey. A third portrays an idyllic scene of the farms and village of East Corinth, Vermont. Finally, there is a shot of how irrigation has made Southern California's one-time desert a garden of fruits and vegetables for, as the USIS caption reads, the Urban Population."

These government pictures excite foreign envy and jealousy rather than admiration, especially as our immigration laws limit sharply any emigration from Europe and elsewhere to the U. S. A. Thus, the pictures offer a will-o'-the-wisp dream.

In contrast, the vast array of American goods on the European market present a lesson in hard work, efficiency and productivity, which is Europe's greatest need. The streets at night are bright with neon signs advertising the products of Western practicality. They outsell European stuff in almost every line—automobiles, toothpaste, soft drinks, candy, medicines, tractors, etc. But nowhere does USIS, so far as I have learned, present a panorama of America at work in preference to the Massachusetts "palazzo."

WONDER—Another phenomenon which impresses Europeans is the number of ordinary Americans who are able to afford these expensive tours. Numerous people over here wonder how they can do it, since Europeans in the same economic category cannot dream of visiting the U. S., or even a nearby vacation spot. hey don't have the money.

Here again, the answer is higher pay, hard work and thrift—other lessons which Europe could learn to advantage.

There are many hard-working and conscientious people in these propaganda agencies. But there seems to be a lack of common sense and an understanding of human nature somewhere, presumably in the top levels at Washington.

They are glamorizing the United States, exciting envy and distrust, instead of publicizing the basic qualities and virtues which have made us the world's richest and most powerful nation. Congressional demands for abolishing these agencies or reducing their appropriations have sometimes seemed shortsighted. However, their work seems to have won us few friends abroad. And unless they adopt a more sensible and practical advertising approach, they could be abolished without any great loss.

For they are not doing a good job of advertising the real United States or its people.

Baskets of white and pink gladioli and palms flanked the altar, which was flanked with candles.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a waltz-length gown of poudre blue silk and lace fashioned on princess lines and featuring an empire waistline, tiny sleeves and a lace bodice designed with a boat neckline. She also wore a matching starched lace cap trimmed with seed pearls and a tiny veil.

She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid tied with white satin streamers. Her jewelry was a silver and turquoise brooch with matching earrings and a diamond studded watch, gifts of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Paul Hang is general chairman of the women's committees for the festival and Mrs. Willis Green will be in charge of the dinner.

Mrs. J. C. Rader will conduct the fancy work booth and Mrs. Ross Phillips will be in charge of a "white elephant" booth. The ladies also plan to have a cake stand.

City's First All Gas "House Of Enchantment" Opens Sunday

In North End
Of Circleville

Modern Structure
Can Be Seen Daily
1 p.m. To 9 p.m.

Circleville's first all-gas model home, "The House of Enchantment," will be open for inspection starting Sunday. The announcement was made today by officials of The Ohio Fuel Gas Company.

The house is located on Markley Rd. in the Markley Addition in the northern part of Circleville. The house can be reached by going out Northridge Rd. to Circle Drive and turning right.

There will be no admission, the officials explained. The house will be open daily from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. through Aug. 29.

Designed as an example of the latest in modern living, the house uses all natural gas appliances. For example there is Servel year-around gas air conditioning. This unit provides either warm or cool air as needed.

OTHER USES of natural gas in the modern dwelling include gas clothes dryer, incinerator, water heater, kitchen range and refrigerator.

The house is ranch type. Construction is stone and frame with a gas starter-burner outdoor fireplace.

Floor plan calls for three bedrooms, two baths, a living, dining room, kitchen and ground floor activity room. The full basement has a laundry room as well as a separate playroom.

Johnson Construction Company, of Circleville is building the house. Decorations and furnishings are being supplied by Mason Furniture Company, a Snyder Furniture Company, Griffith Floor Covering Company, all of Circleville and Norvel's, of Chillicothe.

The house is a model home of the Modern Homes Corporation, of Dearborn, Mich.

Ninety-three per cent of the total structure of a battleship is made of steel.

"THE HOUSE OF ENCHANTMENT" is the all gas appliance home which will open in Circleville Sunday. One of the finest features in this modern dwelling is the Servel air conditioning system which both heats and cools the home from a single unit. The house, which is located on Markley Rd., will be open daily from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Plastered Dry Wall Technique New Development In Building

Plastered dry walls are one of the newest and smoothest developments in modern building technique. Heretofore you took your choice between plaster and dry walls. Now you can have both the speedy and economy of dry wall construction and a coat of quick-drying (paint-it-the-next-day) plaster, thanks to an invention by Vito Busatti.

This new material is a white mortar dry-mix preparation which can be applied as thin as 1/32nd of an inch over gypsum wallboard, plasterboard, rock-lath, concrete, cinder block, brick clay, adobe, iron and steel.

If this material is all that it is cracked up to be, it will be a welcome addition to the shopping list of the do-it-yourself handyman, who wants to finish his basement, add rooms in the attic or obliterate seams and nail dimples in dry wall panels.

The inventor recently won approval of his new plaster from the New York Board of Standards and Appeals. That approval made it legal to use the stuff in skyscrapers. Joseph Platzker, former commissioner of housing and buildings for New York City called it to our attention.

"IT CAN BE TROWELED to a marble-smooth finish even by the most inexperienced hand," said Platzker. "It dries rock-hard without cracking, chipping or peeling, and it can be wallpapered or painted."

Plastered Dry Wall Technique New Development In Building

ed in a matter of hours with no special sealing or priming coats." He pointed out that home builders, using gypsum wallboard and a single coat of the new plaster, are saving the tedious and costly problem of taping, filling and sanding joints, as well as the prime coat of sealer needed on the porous paper surface of wallboard.

"In labor time," he added, "it takes two mechanics and a helper only two days to completely plaster the average 5-room dry-wall home with this material. The next day the painters can move in."

A companion joint filler, developed by the same inventor, eliminates the taping and filling of joints in dry wall construction when you don't want to plaster. This filler also can be used as a tile cement for bathroom fixtures, for cracks around bathtubs and as a wood filler. It is rated to resist a surface pull up to 162 pounds per square inch.

Both the new plaster and the filler are given high moisture resistance. While the plaster is not waterproof, its inventor claims that dampness does not affect its strength.

THIS MAKES it possible to use it directly on basement walls without the use of furring strips, lath, panels or other surface preparation. It can take the place of masonry paint whether the foundation is stone, poured concrete, cinder block or brick.

"The cost of a cellar application," Platzker observed, "would be somewhat higher than painting but a cement paint, but a good deal lower than erecting wall panels, furring strips, lath and vapor barriers."

Nylon is used alone, or in combination with other fibers to make broadlooms, tufted and curly loop-pile types and old fashioned, braided-style rugs. They come in decorator shades, soft pastels, and d tweedy effects.

The carpets have a faintly lustrous quality, clean easily and resist abrasion. Leather is a highlight of the Chicago Furniture Market, with 80 per cent of furniture manufacturers featuring it in sofa beds, tables chairs and desks. Leading colors are turquoise yellow, pale pink, watermelon, blue, gold, cantaloupe, sea green, raspberry and bamboo. Jet black, natural saddle and white are leading neutrals.

15 Steps Listed As Best Ways For Home Improvement Work

The current edition of a home modernizing magazine lists this step-by-step procedure for any home improvement project:

1. Think it over . . . talk it over. Get a clear idea of what your house needs to make it a home. Let the entire family in on the project.

2. Get planning help. Take time to collect ideas from publications on the subject, manufacturers, etc.

3. Organize your projects. Decide which will bring the greatest benefits in comfort and efficiency, and make them your first priority enterprises.

4. MAKE SKETCHES. Put your plans on paper. Measure the area to be modernized, draw up its present layout and sketch in the changes you want.

5. Employ an architect if you can. On a big project, he'll save you more money than his fee.

6. Check local rules — building codes and zoning regulations to see if they permit your project.

7. Select materials and equipment.

8. Divide the work—separate jobs to be done, breaking them down by types of skills needed. Note which you will do yourself.

9. GET COST ESTIMATES. Find out what the contractors or workmen will charge.

10. Get financing, if necessary. Your present mortgage holder is a good prospect.

11. Schedule your projects. Arrange the timetable to allow for weather, family requirements and your own free time.

12. Get your workmen. If you employ a contractor, he will hire workmen. If you don't be sure that you have liability insurance to protect you in case a workman is injured.

13. Buy materials and equipment, and arrange for delivery in accordance with your timetable.

14. GET SET . . . get ready. Clear the decks for action. Move furniture out of the way, disconnect appliances, etc. Avoid damage to your prized possessions.

15. Go! While the workmen's hammers are busy, you can look forward to better living for your family. Your careful planning at every stage means that your projects will cost you a minimum both in time and money.

Boom In Building Continues In 1954

The national building boom will continue at least through 1954, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Building contracts awarded during the first six months of the year were at a record volume, the rate being 17 per cent above that of the same period last year when an all-time high was recorded, the Chamber said. Since awards precede construction, the Chamber pointed out, the boom will last through the months ahead.

Actual expenditures for new construction during the first half of the year reached a total of nearly $17 billion, slightly above last year's record figure for the same period, the Chamber said.

Behind this phenomenal demand for new construction, is the continuing need for new homes, new schools and colleges, hospitals, churches and public works as well as commercial construction.

The strength of the building boom, the Chamber stressed, is among our best reasons for belief that our economy will continue prosperous. For new homes, factories, schools and other construction mean more markets for home and office furnishings, plant machinery and a host of other products—all adding up to steady increases in new jobs.

Remodeling the attic is a challenge to the craftsman, and the possibilities for development are endless.

Before he starts, the craftsman should see his local lumber dealer for advice on how to take advantage of the existing structure, and on how to save money by the wise use of lumber.

The drawing shows the addition of the joists and studs to which ceiling and walls will be fastened. This work must be done carefully, and checked for alignment with a carpenter's level.

Ceiling joists are of 2 by 6-inch lumber for spans over 10 feet long. For shorter spans, 2 by 4's may be used.

Wall studs are 2 by 4's, extending from a 2 by 4 plate on the floor to meet the rafters at a suggested height of not less than 5 feet.

New Annuity, Insurance Tax Rules To Help Over Million

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth in a series of articles explaining how the new tax revision act affects individuals.

By CHARLES F. BARRETT

WASHINGTON (AP)—More than a million taxpayers will get a tax cut under new rules for taxing income from annuities or life insurance included in the giant tax revision act just passed by Congress.

The new rules apply to income received after last Dec. 31.

In annuities, you generally pay much a year to an insurance company. Then at a fixed age or year, you get back so much a year for the rest of your life, or for a fixed number of years.

The big question, taxwise, is how much of the money paid to you is simply a return of the money you paid in—and how much is interest or profit and therefore taxable.

Under the old law you first figured the total amount you paid in—the total cost of the policy to you. Then you were taxed each year on 3 per cent of that cost. The remaining annuity income was tax-free.

For example, say a policy cost you $10,900 and at age 65 you were to get back $1,200 each year for the rest of your life. Under the old law, 3 per cent of $10,900, or $327, would be considered taxable income each year. The other $873 a year would be counted as income for tax purposes.

This would continue until the $873 of tax-free income a year added up to the cost of the policy, or $10,900. From then on—in this example from the 14th year on—you would be taxed on the full $1,200 a year.

This sudden increase in taxes was considered a hardship in many cases.

Under the new law, you first figure your total cost just as before. Then you figure your remaining years of life expectancy, or the fixed number of years, over which you are to receive repayments. Then you divide your cost by this number of years. That is the amount of income you can receive tax-free, and the rest is taxable.

In the example above, say you had a life expectancy of 10 years, a fixed 10 years in which the policy says you are to receive $1,200 a year. Your total cost of $10,900, divided by 10, amounts to $1,090—and that amount of annual income is considered tax free. You would pay taxes on the remaining $110 each year.

These amounts would remain the same throughout—even after you had recovered the full cost of your policy, and even if you actually lived longer than your life expectancy.

Thus, under the old law, you would pay taxes on $327 a year for a while and then you would pay taxes on $1,200 a year. Under the new law you would pay taxes on only $110 a year throughout.

The new rules are different in cases where an employer contributes much of the cost of an annuity or pension policy to an employee. If the employee receives back all of his cost within the first three years of payments to him, he doesn't pay any tax during those first three years. Then after three years, he pays income taxes on the full amount he receives.

Experts estimate this would apply in 95 per cent of the cases where employers contribute to pension or annuity contracts. So the new life expectancy rules will chiefly benefit those who buy commercial annuity policies on their own.

There's one helpful provision in the new act. You don't have to go through complex arithmetic to figure how much of your annuity is taxable. The insurance company, when it starts payments to you, will compute your life expectancy and tell you how much of your annuity income will be taxable.

Another provision gives a big cut in estate taxes. Under the old law, if you paid premiums on a life insurance policy, proceeds of the policy were considered part of your estate when you died. Your survivors paid an estate tax on them. But from now on if you make the policy irrevocably payable to your beneficiary, it is not included as part of your taxable estate. This provision alone is expected to reduce taxes about 25 million dollars for about 10,000 taxpayers each year.

But another change will increase taxes for some. Under the old law, the beneficiary of a life insurance policy could leave the principal with the insurance company and receive tax-free interest in annual installments. Under the new law, this interest will be taxable for anyone but a widow. And a widow will pay taxes on any such interest which exceeds $1,000 a year.

You get a new tax break if you decide to take proceeds from a life insurance policy in a lump-sum payment before you die, or if you get proceeds from annuity or endowment policies in a lump sum rather than in annual installments.

Under the new law, the tax on these lump-sum payments will be the same as if you spread the payments over three years. Under the old law, the tax was figured for single year the payments were received. In effect, you now may get in a lower tax bracket.

More liberal rules also have been adopted for exchange of one insurance policy for another. Generally, any gain from these exchanges has been taxable in the past. In the future, most such exchanges will be tax-free. Except you still pay a capital gains tax on any gain from exchanging an endowment policy for a life insurance policy, or for an endowment policy with a later maturity date.

AFL Aide Outlines Political Goals

CLEVELAND (AP)—Election of congressional and legislative candidates "friendly to labor" should be the main goal of labor's political efforts, Phil Hannah, state AFL executive, believes.

to the Congress and the Ohio Legislature."

Woman Constable For Delicate Jobs

WEST GREENWICH, R. I. (AP)—Mrs. Jewell McCrudden became this town's first lady constable today—because of a recent dispute between two women in a cafe.

Police Chief James G. Albro said that in the cafe hassle one of the women accused the other of having a knife concealed on her person. Police deputized Mrs. McCrudden to make a search. She didn't find a knife, but gained a constable's job to carry out similar duties when needed.

Here's the typical performance record of GMC Hydra-Matic trucks as being reported from all parts of the country

A WHOLESALE BAKER, supplying his entire state, put Hydra-Matic GMC's on his longest routes. In racking stop-and-go-work, they're averaging 58 delivery stops per day, 28,000 miles per year.

Here's what their carefully kept records show:

The Hydra-Matic GMC's are getting 12.2 miles to the gallon—50% more than their standard trucks.

In use now up to 34,400 miles, not a nickel has been spent on repairs for any one of them.

Brake linings, usually replaced at 25 or 30 thousand miles, are still in good shape.

Clutch replacement, usually necessary at about 16,000 miles, is completely eliminated.

New Annuity, Insurance Tax Rules To Help Over Million

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth in a series of articles explaining how the new tax revision act affects individuals.

By CHARLES F. BARRETT
WASHINGTON (AP)—More than a million taxpayers will get a tax cut under new rules for taxing income from annuities or life insurance included in the giant tax revision act just passed by Congress.

The new rules apply to income received after last Dec. 31. In annuities, you generally pay much a year to an insurance company. Then at a fixed age or year, you get back so much a year for the rest of your life, or for a fixed number of years. The big question, taxwise, is how much of the money paid to you is simply a return of the money you paid in—and how much is interest or profit and therefore taxable. Under the old law you first figured the total amount you paid in—the total cost of the policy to you. Then you were taxed each year on 3 per cent of that cost. The remaining annuity income was tax-free.

For example, say a policy cost you $10,900 and at age 65 you were to get back $1,200 each year for the rest of your life. Under the old law, 3 per cent of $10,900, or $327, would be considered taxable income each year. The other $873 a year would be counted as income for tax purposes.

This would continue until the $873 of tax-free income a year added up to the cost of the policy, or $10,900. From then on—in this example from the 14th year on—you would be taxed on the full $1,200 a year.

This sudden increase in taxes was considered a hardship in many cases.

Under the new law, you first figure your total cost just as before. Then you figure your remaining years of life expectancy, or the fixed number of years, over which you are to receive repayments. Then you divide your cost by this number of years. That is the amount of income you can receive tax-free, and the rest is taxable.

In the example above, say you had a life expectancy of 10 years. A fixed 10 years in which the policy says you are to receive $1,200 a year. Your total cost of $10,900, divided by 10, amounts to $1,090—and that amount of annual income is considered tax free. You would pay taxes on the remaining $110 each year.

These amounts would remain the merical annuity policies on their own.

There's one helpful provision in the new act. You don't have to go through complex arithmetic to figure how much of your annuity is taxable. The insurance company, when it starts payments to you, will compute your life expectancy and tell you how much of your annuity income will be taxable.

Another provision gives a big cut in estate taxes. Under the old law, if you paid premiums on a life insurance policy, proceeds of the policy were considered part of your estate when you died. Your survivors paid an estate tax on them. But from now on if you make the policy irrevocably payable to your beneficiary, it is not included as part of your taxable estate. This provision alone is expected to reduce taxes about 25 million dollars for about 10,000 taxpayers each year.

But another change will increase taxes for some. Under the old law, the beneficiary of a life insurance policy could leave the principal with the insurance company and receive tax-free interest in annual installments. Under the new law, this interest will be taxable for anyone but a widow. And a widow will pay taxes on any such interest which exceeds $1,000 a year.

You get a new tax break if you decide to take proceeds from a life insurance policy in a lump-sum payment before you die, or if you get proceeds from annuity or endowment policies in a lump sum rather than in annual installments. Under the new law, the tax on these lump-sum payments will be the same as if you spread the payments over three years. Under the old law, the tax was figured for single year the payments were received. In effect, you now may get in a lower tax bracket.

More liberal rules also have been adopted for exchange of one insurance policy for another. Generally, any gain from these exchanges has been taxable in the past. In the future, most such exchanges will be tax-free. Except you still pay a capital gains tax on any gain from exchanging an endowment policy for a life insurance policy, or for an endowment policy with a later maturity date.

Sport Briefs

By The Associated Press

Youngstown captured the Ohio Little League tournament in Canton yesterday in a 12-3 victory over Bridgeport. The Youngstown youngsters, all 9 to 12 years old, will compete in the regional tournament Aug. 18 at Joliet Ill. Ohio finalists last year, the Youngstown lads swamped Hicksville, 18-1, in the semifinals Monday.

Opening races of the U. S. snipe championship at Mentor-on-the-lake were cancelled yesterday because of high winds on Lake Erie. Depending on weather conditions, officials said, the races might be shifted to Fairport Harbor. Cancelled also was the third in a series of sailoff races to determine a winner for the Welles Trophy.

The domination of Columbus in the Tri-City Women's Golf Tournament ended yesterday in Cincinnati with a victory for Cincinnati over the capital city and Dayton. The Queen City squad piled up 40 points to Columbus' 36 1/2 and Dayton's 27 at the Cloverbrook course.

Ez Charles, in his third effort to get back the heavyweight title lost to Joe Walcott, is in training for his rematch in September against champion Rocky Marciano. Charles started his exercise in his own gym in Cincinnati yesterday.

Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, seeded No. 1, leads a field of 32 into the second round of the 27th annual Essex County Club Women's Invitational Tennis Tournament today at Manchester, Mass. Rain forced postponement of the start of the second round play yesterday.

Three of Massillon's six-time state championship team all picked out-of-state schools. Bruce Schram, tackle, will go to Cornell; guard Ronald Agnes will go to Brown and end Jim Letcavits will follow coach Chuck Mather to Kansas.

Here are the college choices of the other All-Stars:
Ohio University — Fred Meeks, Canton Lehman; Dave Kuenzli, Upper Sandusky; Richard Wray, Lockland; Jerry Keim, Urbana.

Indiana — Salvatore DiPietro, Canton Central Catholic; Ken Watson, Cleveland Euclid.

Ohio State — Ray Beerman, and Tom Crawford, both Toledo De-Vilbiss; Jim Kater Harrison; John Floyd, Columbus North; Leo Brown, Portsmouth.

Kent State — Ronald Fowler, Akron East; Allen Karp, Cleveland Rhodes; Bryan Burke, Cleveland Rhodes.

Syracuse — Larry Reeves, Mentor.

University of Miami (Fla.) — Ray Burton, Chagrin Falls.

Miami (Ohio) University—Jack Bourn, Springfield Twp; Stan Johnson, Springfield Public.

Michigan — Martin Testa, Akron St. Vincent.

Cincinnati — Phil Collins, Cincinnati Roger Bacon; Bob Rizer, Springfield Catholic; Ronald C. Cough, Hamilton Public.

Otterbein — Delbert Thatcher, Cambridge.

Tennessee — Thomas Stockhoff, Cincinnati Hughes.

Indiana Tri-State — Bill Stevens, Marietta.

Michigan State — Dick McDonald, Middletown.

Capital — Charles F. Kessler, Columbus Linden McKinley.

Marquette — Robert Igel, Columbus St. Charles; Ronnie Whitcomb, Fremont Ross; Dave Kimmel, Youngstown Ursuline.

Notre Dame — Frank Kuchta, Cleveland Benedictine.

University of Dayton — Don Zimmerman, Dayton Chaminade.

Youngstown College — Jim Vecharella, Youngstown Rye.

Central State — Willie Simmons, Warren Harding.

Eleven others had not made up their minds but may reach a decision before the end of the week, since coaches from 24 colleges scattered throughout practically every state east of the Mississippi are here for the week-long clinic preceding Friday night's contest.

Redlegs Cop First Of 3 From Chicago

CINCINNATI (AP)—Corky Valentine, Cincinnati's rookie right-hander from Troy, Ohio, outdueled veteran Chicago hurler Howie Pollock last night and the Reds took the first game of a three-contest series, 2-1.

Both allowed only five hits. Frank Baumholtz, Chicago centerfielder, smashed Corky's first pitch of the ball game into the rightfield bleachers for a home run. The other Chicago Cub hits were scattered.

Cincinnati tallied its two runs in the fifth inning on a sparse two hits and some excellent base running.

Jim Greengrass started the fifth with a double which struck the number "9" on the scoreboard clock in centerfield. It was the longest two-bagger in Crosley Field for years. Then Johnny Temple bunted down the third base line, sending Greengrass to third.

Wally Post grounded to third baseman Vern Morgan and Greengrass slid home safely beneath Morgans high throw. Temple hurried to second on the play and advanced to third on a ground out. In a great burst of speed, Temple scored what proved to be the winning run when Valentine grounded out to shortstop Ernie Banks.

Valentine was credited with the winning run batted in.

Odds Favor Moore In Johnson Bout

NEW YORK (AP)—Light heavy-weight champion Archie Moore, still a great fighter as he nears his 38th birthday, is a 5-8 favorite to whip stolid, young Harold Johnson in a 15-round title bout tonight.

The globetrotting 175-pound ruler, now a Miami resident, will be seeking his 19th straight victory when he steps into the Madison Square Garden ring at 9 p. m., (EST) against the muscular, 26-year-old contender from Philadelphia.

It will be the fifth scrap between the two Negroes in a series dating back to April 26, 1949. The first time the clever and experienced Moore floored the ex-sailor twice and won decisively. The next three were all close with Moore winning two and Johnson one.

Wally Moon, rookie outfielder for the St. Louis Cardinals, was graduated from Arkansas University.

Actor As Critic, Has No Illusions

DENNIS, Mass. (AP)—The Rev. S. C. Vern Bowman, rector of Holy Spirit Episcopal Church, has been doubling in brass this week.

He played the part of a doctor in Richard Aldrich's production of "Heaven Can Wait" at the playhouse here. He also wrote a review of the play for the newspaper Cape Codder.

Without referring to himself by name, the rector wrote of his performance: "It was obvious the frustrated ham reading the lines of the doctor was having the time of his life. Let us hope this is not the beginning of the disintegration of the American theater."

try, could lie about very serious matters apparently without a twinge of conscience.

Many serious-minded persons believe that only secular education is correct in our kind of country. They confuse the term religious with the idea of sectarian. This is not only true of those who dislike all religion, but Catholics object to Protestant teachings and Protestants abhor Catholic teachings and Jews fear that their children might be corrupted by both.

On the other hand, many parents are concerned with the increase in juvenile delinquency, the lack of respect for parents, the noticeable pre-marital sex relations among high school students and many similar moral problems which are disruptive of family life and damaging to the individual's opportunities.

For several years now, Director J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI has been calling attention to these many problems from his specialized standpoint. But essentially this is not merely a matter of the increase of crime; it is more a problem of education for moral living in a free society. Therefore it is a problem of education.

CLEVELAND (AP)—H. O. Hawkins, 44, arrived in Cleveland yesterday to assume duties as special agent-in-charge of Federal Bureau of Investigation activities in northern Ohio. Hawkins, who has been in charge of the FBI's Atlanta office since last November, replaces Norman H. McCabe, who transferred to Philadelphia.

World Today

By James Marlow
Associated Press
News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate is heading into another fight on a bill to loosen up the law on atomic energy and its uses. The Senate recently finished a two weeks' battle on the subject.

Democrats who made the first fight are lining up for the new one. Several points in the bill irritate them. One of them covers patents. This is an ABC on the patent dispute.

Briefly, the patent law says: An inventor — an individual or a firm — can get a patent on an invention for 17 years. During that time the inventor alone has the exclusive right to use that invention for his own profit. He can, if he wishes, sell it or let someone else use it also, either free or for a fee. At the end of 17 years the patent expires and the invention becomes public property and anyone can use it.

At this moment no private firm has atomic patents. Because of the secrecy involved and the terms of the 1946 atomic energy law, the government has had complete ownership of all atomic developments. It holds over 700 patents.

The government's AEC—Atomic Energy Commission—not only did its own atomic developing in government-owned plants but had the help of some big corporations working under contract.

Because they were working for AEC, those firms could not under the 1946 law get any patents on discoveries they made. But at least they got knowledge on atomic development, with the government paying the cost.

The bill the Senate is about to consider would allow private business to develop atomic energy not only for the good of the country but for private profit. President Eisenhower doesn't want a few firms, which had AEC contracts, to get a monopoly through knowledge gained while the government paid them.

So a bill, which the House passed July 26 to let private industry develop peaceful atomic power for private profit, said among other things:

The AEC would carefully examine any application for an atomic patent. If the AEC was convinced the discovery resulted from work done for the government, no patent would be granted and the discovery would become public property.

Some Senate Democrats argued this wasn't tight enough protection against eventual monopoly by a few big firms. After much debate, the Senate voted this provision:

Any firm granted an atomic patent, for the first 10 years after obtaining it would have to grant a license for its use by anyone who wanted it. For a fee, of course. A firm which got the license could use the invention for the full life of the patent. This was called "compulsory licensing."

Some Republicans argue this violates the constitutional provision which says a patent holder shall have exclusive rights to his discovery.

Since the House and Senate bills differed on this and other points, a committee from both houses was set up to work out a compromise. They came up with a bill which did this on patents:

It knocked out the Senate's "compulsory licensing" provision and kept the House provision: that the AEC could reject any patent on an invention resulting from work for the government.

Then the compromise bill added this:

Since any firm holding an atomic patent and wanting to build a pow-

'The Badlands' Of South Dakota Visited Yearly By Many Millions

By HAL BOYLE

SCENIC, S. D. (AP)—There is no place in the world where the earth has been tortured into stranger beauty than "The Badlands" of South Dakota.

"Hell with the fires out!" exclaimed Gen. Alfred Sully on seeing them in 1864. Later visitors have compared them to the waterless landscape of the moon or to the portrait of a hanger in technicolor.

Millions of tourists each year are awestruck by the weirdly eroded scenery—the lonely colorful battlements and writhing 2,000-foot-high towering shapes carved by wind and ancient rivers over millions of years.

"But most of them see the Badlands only from their automobiles," said Earl Brockelsby, owner of "The Reptile Gardens," one of the world's greatest snake collections.

"Why don't you let me take you on a tour through them? We'll go where the foot of man never has trod before."

Like a fool I agreed, and then didn't have the force of character to back out. Too bright and too early next morning our safari set out through this arid wilderness.

The party included, besides my host and his victim, two young lady students of paleontology and Warren Morell, editor of the Rapid City Daily Journal.

Before we even reached the picnic site—hobbling from three cactus spikes that had pierced my loafers—I knew I had blundered. The picnic site was a blinding white cradle in a canyon. No shade. Temperature in the sun—probably 110.

Brockelsby cooked the hot dogs five at a time on a hook he used to catch rattlesnakes. When I tried to bite my sandwich, it seemed to me the hot dog tried to rear up and bite back.

"Well, let's go back," I said when the lunch was over.

"Go back?" said Earl. "Why, we haven't started yet."

How true. How true. For three hours we climbed terrifying crags or dried silt, slid down embankments, crawled through poison ivy beds on hands and knees, inched through canyons too narrow for a gazelle with a new Dior bustline.

"Isn't that breathtaking?" said Earl, pausing at one vista.

"Sure . . . is," I panted. "Particularly . . . that big . . . butte that looks like a red castle."

"It isn't red," objected Earl. Maybe not through his eyeballs, but it was through mine.

Twice Earl stopped and handed me fossil teeth from an oreodon, a sheep-like animal that roamed the arid maybe 20 million years ago. I put them in my pocket. Three times I slipped and fell and felt the teeth sinking into me.

Imagine being attacked by a 20-million-year-old fossil sheep. How silly can you get?

"Sabre-toothed tigers used to live here," said Earl. "And there still are a few wildcats around."

Right then and there I decided I had done enough pioneering for a guy who likes nothing better than exploring the bottom of a swivel chair.

"Let's go back," I said. "But first show me this place where the foot of man has never trod."

"Right where you're standing," said Earl.

I bent down and traced the outline of my aching feet with a pencil. Then, so that future Marco Polos wouldn't have to wonder what strange old fossil had left this mark of his passing, I signed my name.

Ohio Narcotics Laws Held Weak According To Committee Report

By DAVE BROWN
Herald Staff Writer
(Last of a Series)

(In two previous installments, local and state officials have pointed out how Ohio and Pickaway County could become the center for narcotics traffic. Also various types of narcotics were classified and explained.)

The Citizens Narcotics Advisory Committee, which includes prominent people from Pickaway County, agrees on one point with emphasis—Ohio's narcotics laws are not keeping step with the times.

In a report issued by the state attorney general, C. William O'Neill, the committee pledged itself to look into the present state laws and make recommendations for the future.

In addition, Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger notes that Ohio and its counties have not been giving proper assistance, on a local level, to federal authorities in narcotics cases.

There are two federal hospitals where addicts may be treated. One is at nearby Lexington, Ky., and the other is at Ft. Worth, Texas.

Motorbike 'Rodeo' Held On Saturday

A "Rodeo", sponsored by the Circleville Whizzer Club, will take place Saturday at Ted Lewis Park from 3 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.

The program will include a contest for skill in riding motorbikes and a written test given by the city police department.

A trophy, presented to the program winner, is being donated by various local merchants. A medal will be awarded to the second place winner.

The safest driver chosen by a panel of judges will be given a safety medal.

Plans have been made to block off part of Lewis Park Saturday for the event. All Whizzer Club members and any motorbike owner may compete.

Scouts Receiving CD Identity Cards

All Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts in Pickaway County will shortly be supplied with Civil Defense identification cards.

CD Director for the county Bernard F. Tait made the announcement adding that all scouts in the Circleville area already have their cards.

Tait said this is another step in setting up a complete civil defense plan for the area.

However, there are only 1,900 beds available at both places.

OHIO has been known for its easy narcotics laws, according to the committee's report. And this has encouraged narcotics traffickers to operate in the state.

But with the advent of the St. Lawrence Seaway project, which will bring ocean going ships to Ohio's shores, narcotics traffic looms high the report concludes.

As U. S. Representative Francis P. Bolton said,

"I have been working in the field of narcotics for over 30 years. I am greatly encouraged by the interest of the citizens of Ohio in this project (of the Citizens Advisory Committee)."

"This is an example of people doing something themselves. Ohio needs stronger laws to chase traffickers out of Ohio."

COMMISSIONER Anslinger pointed out that just because someone says there is no narcotics problem does not mean there is none.

"Because there are many people who are not aware of the narcotics problem and would not recognize it if it did exist," Anslinger explained, "the simplest way of solving the problem is by saying they do not have a problem."

Pickaway County is no exception.
